BARBARIC LOVE PIRATES!

AGES BACK IN THE VIGOROUS MORNING OF HISTORY, MEN SEEKING WOMEN, RAIDED AND ROBBED ONE ANOTHER'S HOMES, ISLANDS, EVEN COUNTRIES.

WOMEN WERE FAIR GAME AND THE HUNT A DEADLY SPORT.

THEN CIVILIZATION TEMPERED MAN'S BARBARISM AND THE DAY OF WOMEN RAIDERS PASSED.

ONLY IN A FEW FAR DISTANT AND UNTRAVELED PLACES DOES THE BARBARIC CUSTOM STILL SURVIVE.

Scarce a generation ago, fierce relentless Moro tribes of piratical Malays were the scourge of the Sulu Sea. Ever ready with their swift sailing Vintas to swoop down on peaceful Island Villages; "Women Raiding" was the order of the day.

Men and boys were struck down or enslaved. The desirable women and girls, shrieking in abject terror, were carried away, later to be sold as concubines in the numerous harems of the Datus or Island Chiefs.

In "Zamboanga" now showing at _____ theatre, the almost extinct barbaric tribal custom of "Woman Raiding" is shown in all its lurid details. The piercing shrieks of terrified women victims, blending with clash of steel and blood-curdling war cries of the raiders as aged defenders are ruthlessly struck down, unfolds such a vivid enactment of this pagan practice that audiences are held spell bound by the realism portrayed.
