SYNOPSIS

SINNERS OF PARIS

After five years in jail, Le Fondu, notorious killer, is released. His very first mission is vengeance . . . to kill Bouvier, the cop responsible for his arrest. Bouvier is unworried but his colleagues prefer to take precautions. Amongst those in the nights "round up" are a prostitute and her procurer, Le Nicois, who is the nephew of Le Fondu. They release Le Nicois on the condition that he spy on his uncle and supply the police with information regarding the killer. Le Nicois has agreed. In the meantime, on the very first night of his arrest, Le Fondu succeeds in murdering Bouvier. He also succeeds in killing his nephew upon learning of his role of informer.

Trap after trap is set for the gangster--each time he escapes. Barot, an inexperienced policeman, has just been added to the force to replace the murdered Bouvier. The teammate of Bouvier, Vardier resents Barot, and there is an affair between Vardier and the beautiful wife of Barot. The tantalizing woman soon inflicts severe humiliation upon Vardier. In his anxiety and desire for revenge, Vardier is responsible for another escape by Le Fondu, and for the accidental killing of another teammate. His chance to redeem himself occurs when the prostitute offers information once more leading to Le Fondu. This time Vardier flings himself upon a deadly grenade, tossed by the desperate killer, sacrificing himself to save his teammates as Le Fondu is finally exposed to their machine gun bullets.
